7 Campbell raising tide in Fort Smith

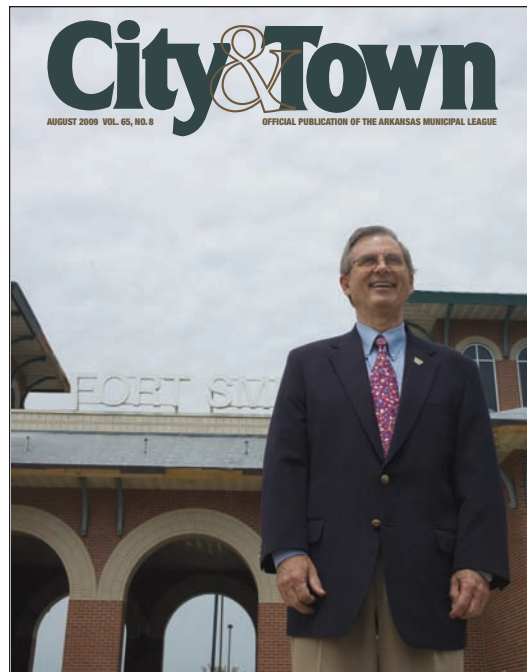

The League's new president, Fort Smith Vice Mayor Gary Campbell, has for years worked to keep his city moving forward, and through partnerships across the state and across the nation, his efforts have been paying off in his city and beyond.

10 Meet your League VPs

Differences in location and background may separate the League's 2009-2010 cast of vice presidents, but dedication to their communities and the state bind them together.

11 League executive director reaches landmark

This year marks League Executive Director Don Zimmerman's 35th year as the organization's leader.

ON THE COVER—With its rich history and a future that looks promising, Fort Smith continues to grow, and Vice Mayor Gary Campbell, the League's new president, is at the vanguard of the city's progress. Inside this issue, Campbell gives us insight into why he's a champion of his city and its people. Read also inside brief profiles of our vice presidents for the year. City & Town will be visiting the hometowns of each of our district vice presidents in the months to come.—atm

Dear Friends,

Help me congratulate our vice presidents for the coming year: North Little Rock Alderman Murry Witcher, First Vice President; Stuttgart Mayor Marianne Maynard, District 1 Vice President; Jacksonville Alderman Reddie Ray, District 2 Vice President; Van Buren Mayor Bob Freeman, District 3 Vice President; and Crossett Mayor Scott McCormick, District 4 Vice President. Each of them has been involved in and contributed to the success of the League. They will make excellent representatives for us this year, and I look forward to working closely with them. City & Town will highlight each of these officers in the following months and the readers will learn more about them and their cities.

It was my pleasure to appoint the chairpersons of the following Advisory Councils: Large 1st Class Cities—Marion Mayor Frank Fogelman; 1st Class Cities—McGehee Mayor Jack May; 2nd Class Cities—Haskell Alderman Rose Marie Wilkinson; Incorporated Towns—Garfield Mayor Laura Hamilton; and Public Safety—Hot Springs City Manager Lance Hudnell. These chairs will lead important committees as well as meet with the Executive Committee to report on their respective committee recommendations.

Jobs and commercial activity are extremely important to the livelihood of every city and town in Arkansas. And that is why economic development holds a special interest to me. Watch for special articles throughout the year in City & Town with commentary and discussions about topics ranging from education to job creation to just plain old company recruitment ideas.

We're all anxious for the stimulus dollars to begin flowing soon to reduce our unemployment levels. If you haven't checked it out, more information can be found on the Internet at www.Recovery.Arkansas.Gov.

In September I will be attending the fall meeting of the NLC Community and Economic Development Steering Committee. This committee always has full discussions on a variety of community related issues. Look for a summary report in a later issue of City & Town.

The Greek philosopher Aristotle said long ago, "Quality is not an act. It is a habit." And that's the image I see in Arkansas community leadership at League meetings. We all continue to keep basic services running while working to improve our communities. Keep up the good work.

League president plans for Fort Smith's future

By Andrew Morgan, League staff

Economic development is a subject near and dear to the heart of Fort Smith Vice Mayor and new League President Gary Campbell. Fort Smith may be the state's second largest city, but it is Arkansas's manufacturing capital. Companies such as Baldor Electric, Golden Living and Arkansas Best Corporation have made the city their corporate headquarters, and companies like Whirlpool, Rheem, Trane, Hiram-Walker, Gerber, Mars Petcare and Mac-Steel keep Fort Smith's manufacturing base strong and diverse. According to the Fort Smith Regional Chamber of Commerce, more goods are produced in Fort Smith than in the entire state of Arkansas.

A native of Fort Smith, Campbell has served in Position 5 on the city's board of directors since 1995. Prior to that he was a member of the Fort Smith Planning Commission from 1988 to 1994 and was its chairman the last two years. He has also served on the Solid Waste Management Board. He is retired after 30 years with IBM. He and his wife, JoAnn, have three grown sons.

More than 83,000 people make the northwestern Arkansas city their home. That number is expected to rise after the upcoming 2010 Census. When considering the many surrounding communities with strong ties to the Sebastian County city, the overall population of the Greater Fort Smith Region approaches 300,000.

Taking a regional approach to economic development has been very important to Campbell. After all, he says, the city doesn't exist in a vacuum, only providing for those who live within its limits. Some who live in Fort Smith work outside of the city. Others come

In the late 19th Century, Fort Smith was a gateway to the Wild West, and "Hanging Judge" Isaac C. Parker famously maintained law and order in the region. This painting of the judge in a more serene moment hangs in the Fort Smith Convention Center. At the nearby National Historic Site, visitors can stand under the gallows where many lawless men met their fate.

More U.S. Marshals are buried in the area than anywhere else in the nation, so it's appropriate that the Marshals Service chose Fort Smith as the home of its new U.S. Marshal's Museum. Construction on the riverfront site will begin soon. As the home of two frontier forts and Fort Chaffee, which continues to serve as a National Guard training site, Fort Smith has a long and varied military history on display. What remains of the old fort walls serves as a gateway to the Fort Smith National Historic site (below).

to Fort Smith from surrounding communities to work and shop. In doing so, they contribute to the city, he says, and the city should contribute to the quality of life for the entire region and even beyond.

"Reaching out beyond Fort Smith has been very important to me," Campbell says.

The need to connect with the world beyond Fort Smith's borders is one reason his involvement with the League has been so important. The League offers city officials the opportunity to gather from across the state and learn from each other's failures and successes. If you as a city leader have a problem, you can be certain that through the League you can find others who have dealt with that very same issue in their communities.

"There's some level of comfort knowing that you're not the only one who has that problem," Campbell says. "The League tries to raise the tide for all cities. A rising tide lifts all boats."

Campbell's efforts extend beyond Arkansas's borders. As a member of the National League of Cities' Community and Economic Development Steering Committee, he is helping shape the NLC's Congressional advocacy agenda on issues such as housing and eco-Creekmore Park is a 27-acre city park in the heart of Fort Smith that features a swimming pool, playground, miniature golf, basketball and tennis courts, picnic areas, gardens and more. The park also features a one-of-a-kind miniature steam engine train on which visitors can tour the park. The city must take special care of the unique engine. Its use is limited to holidays and special occasions. Replacement parts must be handmade.

economic growth that affect cities and towns nationwide. Fort Smith hosted a meeting of the Committee last September. It was the first time an NLC steering committee has met in Arkansas.

Last year Campbell served on Gov. Mike Beebe's Task Force for the 21st Century, a group that set out to learn about efforts across the state to compete in the future. Campbell agrees with Beebe's idea that we should think forward, not about our parents' jobs but about our grandchildren's jobs. Sometimes convincing others to invest in the future can be a difficult idea to sell, Campbell admits.

"You have to project the needs of the future," Campbell says, "not necessarily what makes sense today but 20 or 25 years down the line."

The link between education and economic growth is another important factor for Campbell.

"You can't separate the two."

Fort Smith boasts a strong public school system. It is also home to the University of Arkansas-Fort Smith, which has experienced a surge in attendance in recent years. The school is also home to the Innovation and Entrepreneur Center, unique to the university.

The city's library system holds a special place in the heart of Campbell and his wife, JoAnn, who has spent time on the system's board of directors. With a voter supported tax initiative, the city was able to expand the system in recent years. The new main branch is a beautiful, spacious building with a wonderful view of the lovely Creekmore Park just across Rogers Avenue. The city was also able to build three new library branches. Everyone in Fort Smith now lives no more than two-and-a-half miles from a library branch, Campbell says.

"Everyone in town is within walking distance of a library."

The expansion of the library system was one of several developments in the city that came about after a 1996 tornado dealt a blow to Fort Smith, destroying homes and buildings, many of them historic. Not content to simply rebuild, the city used the opportunity to move forward. A convention center, a growing and surprisingly thriving downtown area and a lively Arkansas riverfront development have resulted. The downtown and riverfront areas are the places to go for a taste of Fort Smith's long and interesting history as the "Gateway to the Old West."

Visitors to Fort Smith curious about its wild and varied history will soon have a new attraction to visit. The city will be home to the new U.S. Marshal's Museum, a national historic museum set to be built right on the riverfront. The museum is expected to bring in 75,000 visitors a year and generate about $7 million a year in revenue.

Located just across the street from Creekmore Park is the main branch of the Fort Smith Library system. In addition to serving the educational needs of the city's children and adults, the library branches also offer space for civic groups and clubs to meet. The Fort Smith Board of Directors even has a temporary home in the main branch. The expansion of the city's library system in recent years is a point of pride for Campbell and his wife, JoAnn, right, who played active roles in promoting the system.

Meet your new League vice presidents

First Vice President

North Little Rock Alderman Murry Witcher

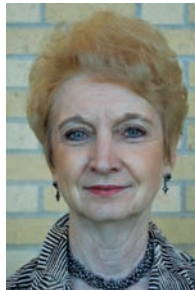

Murry Witcher is the longest serving sitting alderman on North Little Rock's city council. After spending six-and-a-half years on the North Little Rock School Board, Witcher took office as alderman in 1990. A North Little Rock native, Witcher graduated from North Little Rock

High School in 1964 and from there went to the University of Central Arkansas. Witcher works for Entergy as coordinator of regulatory affairs for Arkansas and Mississippi. Becky, his wife of 41 years, recently retired after 39 years as a teacher with the North Little Rock school district. They have two sons.

Vice President District 1

Stuttgart Mayor Marianne Maynard

According to Stuttgart City Clerk Mitri Greenhill, Mayor Marianne Maynard "is involved in practically everything in town." She is a member and a former national officer of the Federated Women's Club, a charter member of the Stuttgart Arts Council, a food bank volunteer and active in her church. She is also active in Stuttgart Unlimited, an initiative started through the Chamber of Commerce to improve and promote the city. Now in her third year as mayor, Maynard began her career in public office as a city council member in 1997. Maynard has lived in Stuttgart since 1967. She and her husband Neil own Mayn-Mart, a downtown Stuttgart furniture store. They have three sons.

Vice President District 2

Jacksonville Alderman Reedie Ray

Born and raised in Jacksonville, Alderman Reedie Ray has been a city alderman for 18 years. He serves on the local planning commission and has been on the Jacksonville Senior Citizens Center Board of Directors for 22 years. Helping seniors is in fact what inspired Ray to run for public office. Volunteerism is also important to Ray, who serves on the Neighborhood Action Council and is involved in "Operation Roundup," a program offered through First Electric Cooperative that encourages customers to round up their electric bill to the nearest dollar. Those amounts are then used to fund special projects in the community. Ray is married and has two children.

Van Buren Mayor Bob Freeman

Van Buren Mayor Bob Freeman is the latest of several generations of his family to make the picturesque northwest Arkansas city his home. His great-grandfather owned a dry goods store downtown until the Great Depression forced him to close shop. Freeman is retired from the Army as a Lt. Col. After his military career took him elsewhere, including a stint living overseas, Freeman returned to his hometown in 1997. He is now in his second term as mayor. Freeman and his wife Terry have two children.

Vice President District 4

Crossett Mayor Scott McCormick

Despite spending some time moving as a child during his father's military service, Mayor Scott McCormick considers himself a native of Crossett. "I love Crossett. It's my home," McCormick says. He graduated from Crossett High School and upon turning 21, he joined the city's police force, where he served for 20 years. He retired from the force in 1998. His experience on the force and the relationships with the citizens he built there have served him well as the city's mayor, he says. McCormick is now in his third term as mayor. He and his wife Mary have two sons.

League honors Zimmerman for 35 years of leadership

The 75th anniversary of the Arkansas Municipal League is not the only cause for celebration we have in 2009. This year also marks Don Zimmerman's 35th year as the organization's executive director. Don has been the League's leader since 1974, when he succeeded his father, Glenn Zimmerman, who died that year.

The League staff in July presented Don with a framed, signed group portrait to show appreciation for his years of leadership. The portrait, taken in June, appears also in the League's recently published history, Great Cities: A History of the Arkansas Municipal League and its Support of Arkansas Cities and Towns. The book, which follows the organization's evolution from 1934 to the present, was made available to delegates at June's 75th Convention. Copies of the history are available from the League.

Conway keeps apace of growth

Through attentive and innovative leadership, Conway continues to grow and improve both its quality of life and quality of place.

By Sherman Banks, guest writer

According to Mayor Tab Townsell, Conway was always a city on the move. "Each decade since 1940 Conway has averaged at least 30 percent growth," Townsell said. "In the 1960s Conway grew 58 percent, and in the 1990s Conway grew 63 percent. Conway is currently projected to grow over 30 percent by 2010."

Mayor Townsell attributes that to a great quality of life as defined by a great "quality of place."

Quality of place is found in natural, structural, social and economic assets. Townsell said that a study published by the University of Arkansas at Little Rock emphasized that Conway is a city that falls into that category of city with a great quality of life as defined a great quality of place. Townsell referred to his grandmother, who felt she had a great quality of life living in a town of a little more than 100 people, but she did not have a great quality of place. Conway has both.

Conway is built around four pillars: its institutions of higher education (Hendrix College, Central Baptist and the University of Central Arkansas), its close proximity to Little Rock for work or shopping, its close proximity to the interstate highway system and the existence of the Conway Corporation, which was established in 1929.

The Conway Corporation is a unique entity made up of private interests that originally managed funds to maintain Hendrix College. It evolved into a corporation that manages all of the utilities of the city and sends residents a single bill covering electric, water, sewer, cable, Internet and telephone. The city of Conway approves the rates and the nominees for the board of directors. People who have moved into the city have found that their combined bill for all utilities is less than their previous electric bill had been.

Conway has four "roundabouts," streets that circle a central plaza. All traffic yields to the right, and there are no stop signs or traffic lights. The roundabouts have played a positive role in the city's progress because they help traffic flow through the city without traffic lights. Townsell said that although there was some skepticism when the first roundabout was built, they have helped improve the infrastructure of the city.

Other recent infrastructure changes include the building of a new fairground from 30,000 square feet to 110,000 square feet with funds from a bond issue through the Advertising and Promotion Commission, five new softball fields and a $1.5 million walking and bicycle trail expansion to the existing trail system. In August the city will close on the purchase of an old industrial site on which to build a new community center that will include an Olympic-sized swimming pool, a hockey rink, indoor tennis courts and an indoor playground. To accommodate the new industry of Hewlett Packard, the city will build two roads to make the city more accessible to employees.

Twenty-five percent of the population of the city is made up of college students, and the city is now providing ways to keep the students entertained and shopping in Conway by adding more nightlife entertainment and 21st century shopping centers. The downtown area has been invigorated by the increase in the number of restaurants that have opened. Five years ago the city would virtually close down at five o'clock, but today the city is still bustling after dark.

Conway also has the third highest number of graduates in the state of Arkansas. (Only Fayetteville and Maumelle have more.) To reflect this fact the Chamber of Commerce has adopted a slogan: "Get Smart."

Conway Mayor Tab Townsell shows off the city's new slogan, which reflects its status as a center of learning.

IIMC accepting scholarship applications

The International Institute of Municipal Clerks (IIMC) invites member clerks, recorders and treasurers to submit applications for scholarship assistance. Three types of scholarships are offered:

- Certified Municipal Clerk (CMC)
- Master Municipal Clerk (MMC)
- IIMC Distance Learning Programs

The IIMC Distance Learning Programs scholarship is for clerks whose municipalities have a population under 15,000 as of the 2000 Census.

For an application please visit www.iimc.com. Completed applications for IIMC Distance Learning Programs must be postmarked by October 12. The deadline for CMC and MMC scholarships is Jan. 4, 2010.

The IIMC scholarships are in addition to those offered by the Arkansas City Clerks, Recorders and Treasurers Association. For more information, contact Paragould City Clerk Judy Reddick, CMC, at 870-239-7500, or e-mail judy.reddick@paragouldcity.org.

Municipal Property Program

Your Municipal Property Program offers broad coverage for your municipal property. The limits of coverage are $50 million per occurrence per member for damages from fire, windstorm and other incidents in excess of $5,000.

Coverage is $15 million per occurrence per member for losses exceeding $100,000 on earthquakes and flooding.

The Municipal Property Program's 2008 annual meeting in November adopted rates according to the following scale for 2009. See the new reduced rates below.

Maximize Your Benefit.

Join the Municipal Health Benefit Fund

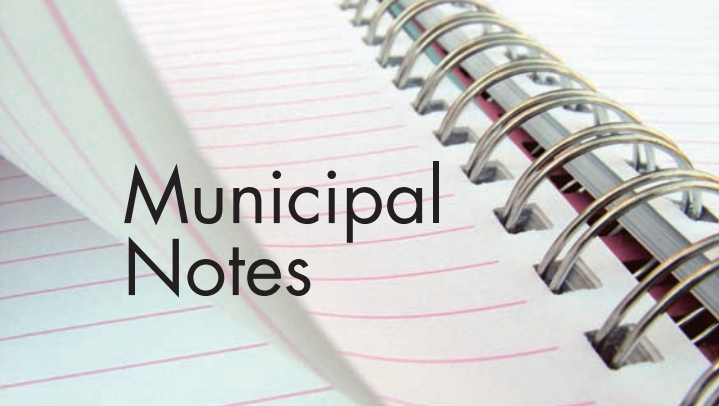

Approximately 90 percent of the municipalities across Arkansas that offer employees and officials medical benefits have joined the Municipal Health Benefit Fund and receive $2,000,000 major medical coverage with stop-loss, employee life, accidental death and dismemberment, dependent life, dental and vision coverages.

For 2009, new additions to the Municipal Health Benefit Fund are:

- Wellness benefits for all covered adults
- Well baby care
- Increases or eliminations of caps on organ transplants, pharmaceuticals, newborn babies and annual benefits
- Additional dental and orthodontic benefits

The Municipal Health Benefit Fund provides quality health protection for your officials and employees at a reasonable rate.

Red Flags Rule enforcement delayed

The Federal Trade Commission has delayed the enforcement of its Red Flags Rule program until Nov. 1 to give creditors and financial institutions more time to review FTC guidelines and develop and implement written identity theft prevention programs.

The Red Flags Rule is an anti-fraud regulation, requiring “creditors” and “financial institutions” with covered accounts to implement programs to identify, detect and respond to the warning signs, or “red flags,” that could indicate identity theft. The financial regulatory agencies, including the FTC, developed the Rule, which was mandated by the Fair and Accurate Credit Transactions Act of 2003 (FACTA).

FACTA’s definition of “creditor” includes any entity that regularly extends or renews credit—or arranges for others to do so—and includes all entities that regularly permit deferred payments for goods or services. Accepting credit cards as a form of payment does not, by itself, make an entity a creditor. “Financial institutions” include entities that offer accounts that enable consumers to write checks or make payments to third parties through other means, such as other negotiable instruments or telephone transfers.

The FTC’s Red Flags Web site, www.ftc.gov/redflagsrule, offers resources to help entities determine if they are covered and, if they are, how to comply with the Rule.

Bryant makes top 100

CNNMoney.com has named Bryant on its list of Top 100 Best Places to Live among small towns in the United States, the Benton Courier reported July 15. With a rank of 86, Bryant is the only city in Arkansas to make the list. First on the list is Louisville, Colo. Bryant sits between Alabaster, Ala., and Clayton, Calif.

Top towns were chosen from more than 1,800 cities with populations between 8,500 and 50,000. In its blurb about Bryant, CNNMoney.com states, “Bryant is a new town with a traditional all-American community. Commercial retail has boomed in the last few years, but it’s the town’s athletic teams that bring the residents together. High school football games often sell out, for example.

“The town has joined together with nearby towns in Saline County to attract businesses. Their efforts look to be paying off: The unemployment rate is below the national average.”

Sprinkler exception proposal added to state fire code

New proposed rules set out by the Arkansas State Fire Marshal’s Office add an exception to the section regulating fire sprinkler installations. The Fire Marshal’s Office will not mandate the use of automatic fire sprinklers in one- and two-family dwellings except in developments with more than 30 dwelling units and only one entrance. Further, the rules allow local jurisdictions to adopt local ordinances requiring the use of

Summaries of attorney general opinions

Recent opinions that affect municipal government in Arkansas

From the Office of Attorney General Dustin McDaniel

Reasons for calling executive session limited by FOIA

Opinion: 2009-077

Requestor: Slinkard, Mary L.—State Representative

Is an executive session, for the announced purpose of considering terms of employment of an employee, followed by an open vote to award a specified salary bonus to a particularly identified employee, a legal action by a city's governing body? Q2) Is consideration of one specified employee's performance and compensation a "general salary matter" and therefore a prohibited topic for executive session? Q3) Have Attorney General Opinions 87-80 and 77-144 been withdrawn, overruled or superseded? If not, does the Attorney General nonetheless consider action taken in conformity with said Opinions to be illegal? Q4) Does the term "employment" in the Freedom of Information Act include matters related to the state of being employed, consistent with, for instance, Black's Law Dictionary, the Arkansas Supreme Court (in a non-FOIA case): Horn v. Shirley, 246 Ark. 1134, 441 S.W.2d 468 (1969), and 11-10-210 of the Arkansas Statutes, or is there controlling legal authority establishing the term to mean the act of hiring only? Q5) If discussion of "employment" is not a valid reason for an executive session except for hiring purposes, which of the legislatively authorized reasons for conducting an executive session (employment, appointment, promotion, demotion, disciplining, or resignation) is the appropriate one to invoke in order to consider matters pertaining to the salary of a specific employee? (Assuming Opinions 87-80 and 77-144 remain valid.) Q6) Given that the Act authorizes disclosure of employee evaluation/job performance records only in certain (non-relevant) circumstances, and the Attorney General has previously recognized that such exemption serves the public purpose of "promotion of candor in ... evaluation of an employee's performance with a view toward correcting any deficiencies," is the city's governing body nonetheless required to conduct performance evaluations of its appointed City Administrator in public, if there is a possibility that the evaluation could result in a salary adjustment or other change in said employee's compensation? RESPONSE: In my opinion, the answer to your first question is "no." An executive session may not be called to discuss a one-time bonus under the background facts you have provided, which contemplate a bonus for "work performed and time put in." As for your second question, irrespective of whether a specified salary bonus fits into the category of a "general salary matter," a one-time bonus, in my opinion, ordinarily is not a proper basis for holding an executive session. However, depending on the circumstances, an executive session that is properly called under one of the listed purposes in ACA 25-19-106(c)(1) could entail a discussion of salary. As for your third question, the answer is "no," neither opinion is invalid and actions taken in conformity with those opinions are legal. You appear to be interpreting those opinions in a way that places them at odds with the FOIA. For the reasons explained in this opinion, I do not interpret those opinions as at odds with the FOIA. As for your fourth question, the term "employment" as used in section 25-19-106(c)(1) means "hiring" only, in my opinion. I cannot respond to your fifth question because the answer is highly fact dependant. Depending on the facts of a given situation, discussion of salary may be encompassed within an item mentioned in section 25-19-106(c)(1) such as "employment" (because discussion of salary often accompanies hiring), "promotion" (because sometimes a promotion entails a pay raise), "demotion" (because sometimes a demotion entails a pay decrease), or "discipline" (because sometimes a disciplinary action entails a pay decrease). Whether a specific scenario meets any of those items must be determined on a case-by-case basis. The answer to your sixth question is "no," because it conflates the analysis of the FOIA's open-meetings requirements with the FOIA's open-records requirements.

Road use limited for riding lawn mowers, motorized wheelchairs, scooters

Opinion: 2009-082

Requestor: Rogers, Tiffany—State Representative

What are the state laws and/or regulations concerning the usage of ride-on lawn mowers, motorized wheelchairs, power chairs, electric scooters and golf carts on 1) city streets; 2) county-owned roads; and 3) state highways?

RESPONSE: The same analysis is generally applicable to all three types of public roads unless otherwise noted. It is my opinion that riding lawnmowers are considered special mobile equipment and, as such, should be operated on public roads only incidentally while performing the task that they were designed to perform. It is my opinion that motorized wheelchairs and power chairs may be characterized as motor vehicles to the extent that they are operated as vehicles on the public roads rather than as personal mobility devices. However, my research indicates that such chairs operated in this manner would likely be unable to meet a number of statutory requirements for motor vehicles and their owners/operators would therefore be in violation of the law. It is my further opinion that many electric scooters may properly be characterized as “motor-driven cycles.” Such cycles may, theoretically, be driven on public roads if they meet specific equipment requirements; however, my research indicates that electric scooters designed primarily as personal mobility devices may not meet some of the requirements applicable to motor-driven cycles. Turning to the issue of golf carts, it is my opinion, as expressed in Ops. Att’y Gen. 2008-142 and 2009-168, that golf carts are not generally permitted on state highways, federal highways and county roads, but may be permitted on city streets for the purpose of driving between the owner’s home and the golf course if the city in question passes an ordinance to that effect.

Counties with half-cent “pay-as-you-go” tax ineligible to levy another

Opinion: 2009-092

Requestor: Shelby, Gene—State Representative

Is Garland County eligible to levy a sales tax under ACA

14-164-340 for the construction of a jail? Q2) If Garland County levies a sales tax under ACA 14-164-340 for the construction of a jail, must the tax [revenue] be shared with any of the municipalities within the county? RESPONSE: Q1) No. This renders the second question moot. This question arises because of the requirement imposed by ACA 26-74-414 on counties, such as Garland, that are levying the one-half percent sales and use tax pursuant to ACA 26-74-401- 414. As long as Garland County continues to levy a one-half cent tax under the authority of 26-74-401- 414, any additional sales tax, must be distributed per capita according to 26-74-414. This effectively precludes a levy under ACA 14-164-340 at this time because revenues from this “pay-as-you-go” capital improvement tax must be expended for the projects approved by the electorate. This necessarily means that the “pay-as-you-go” tax cannot be distributed per capita.

Consistency the key

For your long-range, comprehensive planning efforts to be effective, be consistent, even if you have to change how you do things.

By Jim von Tungeln

If there is one unfailing benefit that a well-crafted comprehensive plan can provide a community, it is consistency. By this I mean consistency in the process of making development approvals, granting re-zoning requests, capital improvement spending and other planning related activities. It involves making rational but unconnected decisions that are loyal to the same set of policies. It is a practice that makes our city attorneys very happy.

It is also one of the most difficult habits for us to develop.

When I was six years old, a two-and-a-half-year-old girl, known forever after as “Little Kathy Fiscus,” fell into an abandoned well in San Marino, Calif. It was the first time I witnessed an entire nation holding its breath for 48 hours. More than 10,000 people came to the scene. Business stopped when news came on the radio. Rescue workers wept openly on the first live television coverage of such an event. A country singer recorded a song about the tragedy that sold over a million copies. One can’t imagine the sort of national focus such an event would cause today.

Meanwhile, the fact that thousands of American children are thrown each day into a well of unending poverty, neglect, danger and hopelessness doesn’t even make the nightly news.

Do unseen forces bedevil the process of consistency, or are we simply flighty in our attitudes?

Maybe both. Let us talk about them in terms of urban planning.

Most of us would agree that plans should be comprehensive and long-range. Most of us would also agree that, having gone to the trouble and expense of preparing them, we should follow their provisions consistently.

City attorneys, as I have mentioned, appreciate it when we do. It is known as the “Consistency Principle,” and provides a rational basis for development decisions. Public administrators appreciate consistency because it promotes public health, safety and welfare instead of individual gain. Taxpayers—as a group—appreciate it because it allows for the efficient use of public funds. Planners love it because it makes us feel good to know our work is taken seriously.

Then why do we fail to follow our own adopted plans? I offer the following.

Sometimes the plan itself fails to recognize reality or to foresee the future. This suggests perhaps that we should trend away from prophesying future land uses. An alternative involves a general projection of land-use suitability based on physical conditions. This allows for flexible plan proposals in both land use allocations and street design. We’ll go into this in more detail on another day.

Another reason that we “bust” the plan is that the underlying urban conditions change. The location of a major industry can,

Consistency requires long-term thinking. The construction under way now on Industrial Drive in Harrison, Ark., has been a goal of the city’s plans for more than 20 years.

Sometimes we suffer inconsistency in taste and design standards.

for example, so change the dynamics of traffic and land use as to negate certain aspects of the plan. Professionals would argue that, in such cases, throwing the plan out and starting over would prove more useful than the “Death of a Thousand Cuts.”

State or national conditions change and can affect our plans. When our state’s cities moved to a sales-tax revenue system in the mid 1980s, the resulting emphasis on commercial development impacted every subsequent urban plan. Similar changes followed the demise of federal grant programs.

But let’s face it. The most common reason why a plan isn’t followed is that an individual property owner doesn’t buy into it. One with deep pockets and a talent for creating crowds and favorable publicity will win just about every time. That’s when the consistency principle goes on trial.

How can we protect our communities by making consistently wise decisions? Some thoughts:

First, although it seems to go against our genetics, keep a long-range perspective. We didn’t form our present city with one decision or in one year. It will take many decisions and many years to take it to where our plan suggests.

Second, make planning decisions on the front end and not after the plan has been adopted. Take the planning process to the public. Let the participants know that their ideas are more important early on than they will be after adoption.

Third, after the plan is adopted, don’t hold any public hearings other than those required by statute. I know that this sounds anti-public participation but it isn’t. It simply forces public participation into the front of the planning process and away from, as Donald Elliott phrases it, “end-game beauty contests.”

Fourth, remember who the client is. I heard a mayor tell his staff once that its job was to “serve business.” May the saints protect us! Shouldn’t it really be the people?

Fifth, practice continuous education and full disclosure. Constantly remind the citizens that our urban environment requires long-range attention and care. Explain to them that the modern world is complicated and dangerous. Further, assure them that you are practicing planning consistency, instead of political posturing, in order to address urban issues.

And finally, show them that, even in the face of fatigue and bitter opposition, you will work without rest to protect and improve each neighborhood in your community.

After all, we would do it for a child who fell into a well wouldn’t we?

Online tree sites continue to flourish

Popular social networking sites like Facebook and Twitter have opened up even more opportunities for urban foresters to promote the value of trees in our communities.

By Christina Fowler

With the increased popularity of online social networking sites such as Facebook and Twitter, many nonprofit organizations have found a way to use these sites to promote their cause as well as raise funds. A keyword search for “forestry” results in a list of more than 500 group and fan pages worldwide on Facebook. These pages range from discussion groups for sustainable forestry in a particular region to individuals sharing photos of forests in their area. Every day, thousands are participating in conversations about the state of our forests, their importance and what should be done to protect them for the future.

Recently, the Arkansas Forestry Commission established a Facebook fan page. Currently, the page has more than 270 followers who receive updates about fire danger, grants available and links to other online resources. The page has also allowed the Commission to receive comments and questions from the public regarding how burn bans are implemented as well as how they are able to use the Trees of Arkansas book for school projects. The Arkansas Urban Forestry Council has also found a way to utilize the social networking site by creating a group page allowing members to share ideas, success stories, photos and more.

Tree boards may also find this site helpful by using the “Cause” application. By creating your agency’s profile, you can also create a cause that you can use to recruit friends or fans, keep people updated on your activities and raise money that goes to your registered 501 (c)(3) nonprofit organization of choice. Donations are processed automatically via credit card, and the results are tallied and then reported via a public “scorecard” in the cause. For example, Arkansas Children’s Hospital’s Race to End Cancer Cause has more than five million members and has raised more than $58,000 in only a few months.

The Heartland Tree Alliance, Mid-America Regional Council, Kansas Forest Service and Missouri Department of Conservation decided to use Twitter, a micro-blogging site that allows the user to post 140-character updates to their account, to promote their second annual Tree Tag Campaign. A profile was created for “Penny the Oak,” a pin oak located in Kansas City’s Loose Park. The public can follow Penny by visiting www.twitter.com/PennyOak, and are even invited to take pictures of themselves with Penny and e-mail photos for posting on the site.

“What exactly would a tree say,” you might ask? The posts stress the benefits the tree provides to the community. For example, in a recent post Penny says, “I am a pin oak, one of the most popular deciduous tree species in the Midwest. My value to the city is $25,804 and growing!”

Penny is one of 135 trees with price tags to show the monetary value of their environmental, economic and social benefits. The dollar amount attached to each tree is based on its estimated returns to the community, including reducing stormwater runoff, improved air quality and higher real estate values. The estimates are based on the tree’s species and life span. Such price tags have been installed in four counties in Missouri and two in Kansas, with the trees having a total estimated value of more than $2.4 million. More information about this project can be found at www.heartlandtreealliance.org.

The Georgia Urban Forest Council and Georgia Forestry Commission joined forces to create the online community The Grove (www.georgiagrove.org). The site’s goal is to educate, engage and encourage residents to plant trees and protect the state’s urban tree canopy. The Grove allows families and friends to share photos and their stories about planting trees to commemorate special life moments or simply “just because.” Members can also create groups—or “groves”—to interact with other members within the online community. Another interesting feature of The Grove is the interactive Tree Match Tool. It provides guidance on choosing the right tree to commemorate a special event, as well as information on tree planting, tree care and the benefits of maintaining a healthy urban forest.

The Arkansas Urban Forestry Council has turned to the site itreebank.org to help them raise funds for their various programs. The Tree Bank program was created by TreeLink to enable any city to develop a community fund for tree planting, care and education. It has been developed specifically for urban forestry initiatives and provides an easy to use donation system. TreeBank donors can direct their contributions to their local Tree-

Have fun in the sun safely

In case the longer days and stifling heat haven't tipped you off, August in Arkansas has arrived, and with it comes some very real dangers that some people find out the hard way.

By Johannes M. Gruenwald, M.D.

On average there are more than 400 heat-related deaths annually in the United States, with Arkansans accounting for about a dozen of those each year. Thousands of other Arkansans each summer experience adverse affects from the heat.

Most of us are lucky enough to have refuge at work or play from the direct sun, but even for those who don't, there are safe ways to help beat the heat.

The heat is on

Though the elderly, those with health problems and very young children are the most vulnerable to extreme heat, anyone—even strong, healthy athletes—are at risk.

Our bodies come equipped with an internal thermostat designed solely to help you maintain proper and safe body temperatures. Much like a heat wave can cause problems with your air conditioning unit at home, the extreme heat can cause your internal thermostat to malfunction.

These are a few of the most common reactions to heat:

Heat rash—Caused by excessive sweating during hot, humid weather, heat rash is a skin irritation that is most common in young children. Treating heat rash is relatively simple and usually does not require a trip to see the doctor.

Heat cramps—For heavy sweaters during strenuous activity, heat cramps are a common effect from the heat. Your body's salt, magnesium and water get depleted, causing muscles to cramp. Once they set in, the best thing you can do is sit, relax for a few hours and drink a sports drink or clear juice until they subside.

Heat exhaustion—Heat exhaustion is the body's response to the excessive loss of your body's essential fluids, water and several important electrolytes. Common warning signs include paleness, cramps, dizziness, headache, nausea and fainting, among others. If it goes untreated or symptoms last longer than one hour, heat exhaustion may progress to heat stroke. For a patient with these symptoms, a trip to the emergency room should be strongly considered.

Heat stroke—This occurs when your body's temperature rises rapidly and your inner thermometer fails to regulate it. Heat stroke can cause death or permanent damage if emergency treatment is not provided. If a patient has a heat stroke you should call 911 for a quick transport to the emergency room. Until professional treatment is given, it's important to cool the victim any way you can—a cool shower, a garden hose, a sponge bath or wrapping them in a cool, wet blanket. Do not give the victim fluids to drink.

Stay cool

Obviously, the No. 1 protective factor against heat-related illness and death is air-conditioning. But unfortunately, not everyone has air-conditioning. Check to see if your community has a program to distribute box fans to those without air-conditioning, because this can save lives.

Because heat-related deaths are indeed preventable, it's important to be aware of those at risk and what can be done to prevent them.

Be sure to drink plenty of fluids, regardless of your activity level. It's important to remember that if you wait until you're thirsty to drink, you've waited too long. Also, be sure not to drink liquids that contain alcohol or large amounts of sugar, which actually make you even thirstier.

When it comes to being outdoors in the heat, use common sense. Avoid hot foods and heavy meals; drink plenty of cool liquids, take extra care for children and the elderly; limit sun exposure; and most importantly, pay attention to your body's warning signs.

Tenant User Liability Insurance Program

Does your city allow private use of its facilities? Give your city extra peace of mind by offering TULIP liability coverage!

By offering TULIP, your city helps individuals and groups protect themselves and their guests—and the city gets an extra layer of protection against loss.

This program is sponsored by these organizations:

National League of Cities

Why should your city offer coverage through TULIP?

Many cities allow individuals and groups to use or rent municipal-owned facilities. When someone is injured at one of those events, they may sue the city and the event organizer. Dealing with claims, regardless of their merit, can be expensive and time-consuming.

When individuals purchase TULIP coverage for their event, your city is automatically named as an additional insured on the policy. This gives added assurance that your city will be protected from claims arising from an event held on city property.

What does TULIP cover?

Coverage up to $1 million in protection is available for many types of events including:

- Receptions
- Reunions
- Festivals

How does TULIP work?

Individuals purchase coverage online from HUB International through the Entertainment Brokers International (EBI) website.

After event information is entered into the secure web site, an instant quote is generated, and the policy can be purchased with a credit card.

Costs are based upon the event type, number of people, level of risk, length of the event, special requirements and amount of coverage needed.

A certificate of insurance is sent to the purchaser and the city via email.

Individuals and groups who use city property are often unaware that they can be held legally and financially responsible for injury, accidents and property damage resulting from their event. TULIP keeps them protected.

Retreats offer long-range perspective

Organizing a retreat to focus on long-term planning issues can help a community solidify its vision for the future.

By Chad Gallagher

With the end of summer upon us and fall approaching, pausing and taking a short break is appropriate. For municipalities the summer is busy with parks activity, street paving and seasonal maintenance. Preparing the municipal budget for the new year is only a short time away. In between these two busy spells, each municipality should consider a time out for long term planning.

The old adage is true: If you fail to plan then you've planned to fail. You could also add that if you plan and never execute then your plans were a failure. Planning and execution are key components to achieve any desired purpose. While the two must go together, the first step must be planning.

Long-term planning at the municipal level is often absent. When it is present, it is sporadic at best. It is easy in the midst of the daily routine to get bogged down. When dealing with sanitation, street repairs, a tight budget, police issues and much more, who has time to sit around and dream about the future? However, progress and success do not happen by chance. Everyone may hit a lucky streak every now and again, but long-term success and achievement come through strategic planning, thoughtful action, determination, sacrifice and hard work. For these there is no substitute.

Whether the challenges facing your city are economic development, a downtown in disrepair, housing crisis or annexation woes, long-term strategic planning can help. We recommend that every city conduct a formal needs assessment and with its result, walk through developing a formal community blueprint. This strategic plan creates a shared image of your community's envisioned future. This visionary blueprint must not only clearly articulate where the city is going and what it will look like in five, 10 or 20 years, but it must also make serious determinations about how to get there.

Most communities and city councils have some level of shared vision for the municipality's future. Agreeing on how to get there is an entirely different matter. Communities with a formal blueprint or ideal community plan must craft specific strategies that will take them to the destination. A plan without a clear and executable process will only lead to frustration and failure. Every strategic plan and course of action the city takes should move the city toward the desired end vision. Anything else would be like a man saying he wants to go from Little Rock to New York but takes off walking south to get there.

We strongly recommend that municipal leaders pause at least once a year for a planning and development retreat. These strategic retreats can last from one to three days. By getting away from the busy activities of the office and the daily distractions that demand attention, municipal leaders can focus on long-term planning. The retreat could include a variety of special guests, depending on the focus of the retreat and the issues to be discussed.

Every strategic planning retreat should have a clear agenda and specific goals and objectives. In addition, we strongly recommend that you use a third party to facilitate the meeting. This allows someone without specific interest in any of the agenda items to move the meeting along appropriately. It also brings a sense of fairness and objectivity to the meeting when there is more than one approach among parties. This unbiased third party will strengthen the process of the meeting and give it credibility for all participants.

Long-term planning critics often say that strategic plans are a waste of time. This can certainly be true if they are never executed. Yet the only way to ever execute a plan is to first devise it. As the fall approaches, consider moving to the mountain for a day or two and as a team gain an elevated view of your community's future. Take the opportunity to make plans together for mutual success. Call us today if we can help you with your plans for a strategic planning retreat.

Program encourages healthy habits

A new wellness program designed specifically for use by parks and recreation agencies is helping community children learn the importance of healthy eating and physical activity.

By Amy Rea, guest writer

In 2007, an innovative child wellness program called Wise Kids was introduced through beta tests at five park and recreation agencies in Tampa, Fla., Joliet, Ill., East Hartford, Conn., Minneapolis and Saint Paul, Minn. Created by Minneapolis-based Sājai Foundation, Wise Kids aims to educate and inspire children ages 6 to 11 to make wise nutrition and activity choices. According to Sājai president, Melissa Hanson, the foundation chose to focus Wise Kids on reaching kids in out-of-school settings because this is where children spend most of their free time.

“We think that children are able to make the right choices about what they eat and how they play, if we only give them the right knowledge,” Hanson says. “Wise Kids reaches kids in after school and summer programs and ultimately enables them to live healthier lives. Through our beta tests we showed that we can have a very positive effect on children, and even on their parents.”

The simple concept of energy balance

Over the course of nine weeks, Wise Kids teaches children the concept of energy balance—calories in = calories out—with the goal of helping them adopt healthy eating and activity habits. Each session of Wise Kids follows the simple learn-do-play format: 15 minutes of self-directed concept learning, 15 minutes of learning activities to reinforce the concepts and 30 minutes of activities to promote learning through physical movement and fun. Program materials include a tool kit, games, marketing materials, a training guide and CD, and a web-based program evaluation tool. Illustrated workbooks are provided to each child to guide self-directed activity and increase understanding, and program leaders are supplied with all the materials they need to administer the turn-key program and make it an engaging and active learning experience.

Wise Kids starts by teaching children the connection between healthy eating, exercise and overall wellbeing.

Arkansas cities will soon have the opportunity to participate in Wise Kids.

According to Sandy Fiallo, superintendent of playgrounds and centers at Tampa Parks and Recreation, there is a great need for this type of program because many children are not learning these concepts in school.

“In many school districts in the state of Florida, PE classes are being eliminated because of the demands of curriculum and testing,” Fiallo says. “I believe that as parks and recreation professionals it is our role is to help our children get a real balance of wellness education in their lives. Wise Kids is the right program at the right time. It builds and reinforces good habits and asks the kids to adapt them to their everyday lives. We were very fortunate to have been selected as a beta site for the program.”

Wise Kids must have struck a chord with parents, too, because registration for the program was filled in just one day. The Tampa Wise Kids program was presented every day for two hours. It was broken down into a simple daily format that first had children compiling a worksheet and discussing a presentation on nutrition, and then proceeding into an activity component that illustrated the key concepts. Such activities might include circuit training or an obstacle course. According to Fiallo, the kids were not just sedentary and being lectured to. They actually got to use and apply what they were learning about energy balance.

At the conclusion of the program, Tampa sent a questionnaire to the participating parents and 87 percent said that they would recommend the program to a friend, and 80 percent said that Wise Kids had sparked a conversation about health at home.

“What we like about Wise Kids was that unlike other fitness programs Wise Kids pools it all together—the fitness and the nutrition,” Fiallo says. “Wise Kids gave us a very structured program that provided our leaders with everything they needed to present the curriculum. The materials for leaders were illustrated in step-by-step fashion so even those without a wellness background could review the literature and then step forward and lead the program. And from a child’s perspective the entire experience was approached in a fun and rewarding way with engaging worksheets that kept kids focused.”

The Săjai Foundation is now taking Wise Kids nationwide, and has already signed up more than 100 parks and recreation agencies in 32 states, including Arkansas, Texas, Indiana, Illinois, Virginia, New Jersey, Vermont, California and Oregon.

Amy Rea is communications coordinator for the Săjai Foundation. To learn more about bringing the Wise Kids program into your programming schedule, call her at 952-288-3364, or e-mail Amy@sajaifoundation.org.
